THE ORIGINAL SALTY DOGS & CAROL LEIGH

As previous concerts in this series have demonstrated, traditional jazz constantly replenishes itself by attracting new generations of musicians — as well as listeners. We have presented artists who began their professional careers before 1920, others closer to a half-century later. Tonight we welcome a group that was originally formed at Purdue University in 1947, and has maintained its musical style and purpose ever since. The Salty Dogs are devoted to that heritage of ensembles led by King Oliver, Louis Armstrong, Jelly-Roll Morton, Bix Beiderbecke, etc. and later groups such as Lu Watters and Turk Murphy, plus the authentic blues tradition of Ma Rainey and Bessie Smith.

As is so often the case with artists of uncompromising common convictions, members of the Dogs combine their art with other pursuits in order to preserve the integrity and availability of the group. While their home base is now Chicago where six of them reside, leader/cornetist Lew Green, a sales manager with McCall's, lives in Connecticut, and singer Carol Leigh, formerly with Turk Murphy, works out of New Jersey. Clarinetist Kim Cusack gave up public school teaching to devote more time to his playing, while banjoist Jack Kuncl early became a retired printer for the same reason. Tom Bartlett, trombone, is a medical equipment salesman, while Mike Walbridge, tuba, works for a chemical company and also plays with the Chicago Footwarmers. And pianist John Cooper, with the Dogs since 1952, is a personnel director for the Phizer Corporation. Finally, drummer Wayne Jones mixes full-time performing with authoring record reviews.

This range of activity combined with infrequent changes of personnel over the decades has allowed the Dogs to maintain a consistency that has led one enthusiastic and articulate observer to write, "This vital element of group continuity is the Salty Dogs special strength: their superb musicianship is immensely enhanced and fortified by their seemingly telepathic communal knowledge of each other's musical thinking, style, and idiosyncrasies. The result is spine-tingling, exuberant ensembles and accompaniments that fit, flow and swing effortlessly, endlessly, with buoyant, bubbling effervescence rarely heard since the twenties."

The Salty Dogs are truly a band for all seasons; they are in fact a better ensemble than some from which they take their inspiration.
